

Patriotism, Chicago Brand.
Other Cities Need It.
"To Make Money, Make Quantity."

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.
(Copyright, 1920.)

Patriotism, national and local, is a building force. Through the years it has urged man to do something worth while on his particular spot.

Observe Chicago. The fast train stops, the porter yells "Chicago!" with all his might, as well satisfied with himself as the doctor who says, "It's a boy."

Every Chicagoan hears the magic word with intense pleasure; never mind about the smoke that lies low, the wind that whistles, the slippery pavements, the blinding snow—it's Chicago.

Your pilgrimage leads to the big stone building where Marshall Field built his hundred millions. A young man, James Simpson, sits in the older man's place. You say to him: "Don't fail to buy that Cornelius Vanderbilt house at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue; it's the most valuable piece of real estate in the world because of its marvelous possibilities, and."

You can go no further. The Chicago business man is on his feet. "Hold on, you're wrong. The most valuable piece of real estate in the world now and in the future is at the corner of State and Madison, right in this city. The world's greatest future is right here. We can do here for fifty or a hundred millions what you couldn't do in New York, Paris or London for twenty times the money, and we will do it."

"This city, Chicago, will pass New York and London in size as a mere matter of course. It will eclipse Paris in artistic beauty, and it is going to do these things in a hurry. We have the friendliest feeling for New York city, which will be known in years to come as the 'Eastern gateway to Chicago.' We'll have a Southern gateway on the Gulf, admitting ships that will reach our docks by water."

"The Golden Gate is Chicago's western door. This is the natural center of the United States and of the world. And I tell you the day is not far off when this country and the whole world will come here, not for business merely, but for pleasure, as the world's great resort."

"I read what you wrote about the convention of Harst and his friends, the size of Mr. Harst's New York papers and all the rest of it. But Mr. Harst's best and most valuable papers are right here in Chicago. I don't believe that Mr. Harst himself realizes what it is to have such papers as he has in this city. Of all his properties the Chicago papers are the crown jewels."

Thus talks every earnest Chicago citizen. To him Lake Michigan is better than any Mediterranean. Illinois is the Garden of Eden, and Chicago is the choice spot where the Tree of Knowledge grows. He doesn't hear the East a-calling and he doesn't go West. He stays where he is, builds one "fine home," tears down, builds another one bigger and finer, as soon as he can afford it, and pities all outside of Chicago, as the Turk used to pity the Gilaui.

He doesn't doubt that Chicago is destined to reach from Gary to Milwaukee. That is why Chicago grows and thrives as it does. That is why, in all probability, Chicago will be the greatest city in the world, and the corner of State and Madison continue to be the greatest corner in the world.

If you have faith you can move mountains. And the Chicago man has faith enough in Chicago to move the Himalayas, Rocky Mountains, Andes and Alps, all piled into one.

If all the citizens in all the cities in America felt as Chicago men feel, reconstruction wouldn't take long, and the world outside of America wouldn't have much chance.

DUBLIN, Jan. 16.—Armed men, alleged to have been Sinn Feiners, attacked a party of guests motoring to a ball given by Major Persse at Loughrea, twenty-one miles southeast of Galway, Tuesday night, according to reports here.

Army officers in the party repelled the attackers after a revolver battle, the report says. The campaign against the government order prohibiting use of automobiles without a special permit has caused much trouble in the south and west.

Mother of Maude Tabor To Be Put On Trial For Chloroforming Daughter

PAW PAW, Mich., Jan. 16.—Mrs. Sarah Tabor, eighty years old, will be brought to trial for the slaying of her daughter Maude, it was said by the authorities here today following the confession of the aged woman's son, Walter O. Tabor, that his mother killed her daughter because she "didn't want Maude's baby to be born."

Would Have Been An Heir.

The birth of the child, according to another heir to the Tabor estate, Tabor's confession, would have made which was valued at $40,000. An overdose of chloroform was administered and the boy then put into an iron-bound trunk and locked in the Tabor cellar. That was in 1915. More than three years later, it was found by Mrs. Florence Critchlow, another member of the Tabor family, and Mrs. Sarah Tabor and Walter were brought back from California, where they had gone after Maude's death.

Father of "Robin Hood" Once Conspicuous in D. C. Social Circles.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Reginald De Koven, the noted American composer, died in Chicago early today. Death came suddenly while he was visiting friends.

Mr. De Koven was stricken at the home of Mrs. Joseph Fish, on South Shore Drive, where he had gone after the opera with a number of friends. He apparently was in the best of health. He died within a short time. Mrs. De Koven is visiting friends in New York. She was immediately apprised of her husband's death. The composer was fifty-nine years old. He recently came to Chicago to supervise the production of his latest opera, "Rip Van Winkle."

His fame rests upon a delightful series of romantic operas, which include "Robin Hood," "Rob Roy," and "Maid Marian," most of them being produced by the Bostonians, a light opera troupe which reached international renown. De Koven was born in Middletown, Conn., in 1859, and when eleven years of age was taken to England by his parents. He was graduated from Oxford in 1879, and then began his serious study of music. He went to Germany to study under Spiedel, Lebert, and Pruckner, and followed with courses in light opera composition under Gense, von Suppe, and Delibes.

SHOOT 3 AND CLUBS INFANT

Alleged Betrayer Charged With Slaying Girl, Their Child, and Two Others.

FACED TRIAL FOR ASSAULT

Sister of Baby's Mother Watched Deaths From Attic Hiding Place.

ARMORY, Miss., Jan. 16.—Four persons were slain here last night. Three of the victims were shot, one was clubbed to death. Their home was dynamited and their bodies were burned.

Charles Marshall, a neighboring farmer, is in jail under heavy guard at Aberdeen, Miss., charged with the crime.

The dead are: ROBERT MILLER, forty-five, farmer, residing three miles from Amory.

MISS FANNIE GREEN MILLER, eighteen, his daughter. An eight-month-old baby.

Claim Marshall Is Father. The baby is alleged to have been the child of Charles Marshall, the accused man, and his desire to prevent the Miller girl from testifying against him in a criminal assault case is given by the authorities as the motive of the crime.

Marshall was under bond on a charge of assaulting the Miller girl about eighteen months ago. Following the alleged assault, Miss Miller's baby was born. Marshall was to have gone to trial next month, and Miss Miller would have been the State's chief witness against him. Authorities allege he deliberately set out to slay the entire Miller family in order to prevent the prosecution of the assault case.

Young Girl Escaped. Pearl Miller, thirteen, was the only member of the family to escape. She saw the tragedy and her story resulted in Marshall's arrest.

About 7 o'clock last night, she says, several dogs in the yard began barking. Leonard Miller opened the door to investigate. His father picked up a shotgun and followed. They circled the house, but found nothing suspicious.

The father and son had just entered the front hall, when two shots rang out in quick succession. Both men fell dead on the floor of the hall. A second later a dynamite explosion rocked the house, blowing away a large part of the kitchen.

Clubbed Baby To Death. Pearl Miller, terrified, ran to the attic. Her sister, Fannie Green Miller, ran into the hall, clasping the baby to her. A third shot was fired and the sister fell dead near the bodies of her father and brother. The baby crawled from her arms and began creeping around the floor.

Then Marshall entered, according to Pearl Miller, saw the baby, and clubbed it to death with the butt end of his rifle.

Pearl Miller was looking down from the attic and watched him, too terrified to make a sound, she says.

LEAGUE BORN WITHOUT U. S.

Nine Nations Are Represented At Opening Session Held In Paris Today.

FRENCHMAN IS PRESIDENT

Leon Bourgeois Gets Office Intended for Wilson—Next Meeting in London.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The League of Nations became a reality today. Its first session convened at 10:35 a. m., in the famous "Clock Room" of the French foreign office.

Leon Bourgeois, president of the French Society for a League of Nations and president of the French senate, presided.

Bourgeois delivered the opening address, followed by Earl Curzon, of Great Britain, secretary of state for foreign affairs.

Bourgeois Elected President. Bourgeois was elected permanent president at the conclusion of the first session, which adjourned at 11:50 a. m.

Immediately after the session convened Bourgeois was elected temporary president.

The League of Nations has been allotted several distinct tasks. President Bourgeois said, in his opening address: "First is practical execution of the clause of the treaty of Versailles. Then the constituting of an international organization for regulation of economic and social life that will form the foundations for the new era now opening. Finally there is the international regulation of labor conditions to insure welfare of the workers and social peace toward which already much has been accomplished."

Referring to the failure of the United States to accept the league, Bourgeois said:

"The task of presiding at this meeting and inauguration of the greatest of international institutions should have fallen to President Wilson."

HEAR SIMS BEFORE DANIELS ON AWARDS

Democratic Attempt to Call Secretary of Navy First for Senate Quiz Fails.

An attempt by Democratic Senators to prevent Admiral Sims from testifying ahead of Secretary Daniels in the Senate Naval Affairs subcommittee's investigation of naval awards failed when hearings opened today.

Charging that it would be "discourteous" to Daniels to hear a subordinate first, Senator Pittman of Nevada, Democrat, moved that Daniels be called. The motion was rejected 3 to 2 by a party division.

Admiral Sims sat calmly through a 20-minute wrangle over whether he should be permitted to testify.

Second Effort Also Fails. A second effort in behalf of Daniels also failed when the subcommittee voted down a motion to hear Daniels immediately after Sims testified.

"We ought to conduct this hearing with at least police court justice," Pittman declared, protesting against procedure contemplated by the committee.

"A man who lost in battle should not receive a special award due to those

Constitutional prohibition—the dream of reformer for more than a century—becomes a reality at midnight in every nook and corner of the United States and its possessions.

John Barleycorn Deported. From the land on which he was once so popular, John Barleycorn is today being formally deported by the Constitution after being granted a leave of absence by wartime prohibition.

Virtually the only celebrations to commemorate the sailing of the Barleycorn "ark" are jubiliations of prohibitionists in various cities, who confidently predict he will never return. His friends are still planning their faith on one hope—that the Supreme Court somehow will find constitutional prohibition invalid.

A force of 1,400 special prohibition agents, backed by other Government officials, will start tonight to enforce the letter of the constitutional law.

Wartime prohibition had many leaks, but the nation will be long dry under the amendment. Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, predicted today, the Volstead law as applied to constitutional prohibition giving the Government much greater power.

Take Liquor Inventory. The first work of enforcing the amendment will be to take a complete inventory of all liquor stocks in the country. All holders of liquor, except that in private homes for personal use, must report it immediately.

Three hundred Haitian bandits attacked the city of Port Au Prince, Haiti, yesterday morning, the Navy Department was advised today.

About 150 of the bandits were killed, captured or wounded, the Navy Department was advised. They were repulsed by American marines and the gendarmerie of Haiti.

There were two casualties among the American marines—Private L. Coombs, seriously wounded, and Private S. M. McLaughlin, slightly wounded.

The Navy Department received the following dispatch today from Col. W. H. Russell, in command of the First Provisional Brigade of Marines in Haiti:

"Three hundred armed bandits at Gour this morning (January 15) attempted enter Port Au Prince, dividing into three columns. Joined by a few from bad section Port Au Prince. Promptly encountered marines and gendarme patrolling parties, who drove them back and pursued them. Over 50 per cent killed, wounded, and captured. Believe lesson will be sufficient to prevent repetition."

Patrolling parties have been thrown out to prevent further attacks, the Navy Department announced.

The dispatch stated that the bandits attempted to enter Port Au Prince "at Gour this morning." Officials said that they were confused as to whether "Gour" was an entrance to the city or whether the dispatch had been garbled and the message meant the attack was made at "four this morning."
